The 139th year of Phillips Academy started Tuesday with examinations for the entering classes. Recitations for the two lower classes started at 8:00 o'clock Thursday, and for the two upper classes at 4:00 o'clock Thursday. It appears as though the school will have the largest registration in its history if all students appear who have applied and been passed and approximately 600 students will attend this year. These boys come from all over the world. Among the countries represented are Argentine, Canada, Guatemala, China, Mexico, Siam, Cuba and Spain, and the following states: Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New York, West Virginia, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Michigan, New Hampshire, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio, Idaho, Kentucky, Wisconsin, New Jersey, Louisiana, Indiana, Mississippi, Vermont, California, Washington, Colorado, Utah, District of Columbia, and Oregon.

There have been but few changes in the faculty. The men retiring from last year are as follows: C. A. Pifer, Instructor in English; E. L. Baker, Instructor in Modern Languages; W. H. Lillard, Instructor in English and Principal's Assistant; F. C. Bangs, Instructor in Mathematics.

Burns, and it was fortunate that the fire did not start later, as it might have been disastrous with so many wooden buildings in the neighborhood.

Trappers Make Money

According to reports from British Columbia it pays to be a trapper there. The fur products of this province total about $400,000 each year. One trapper sent in from Caribou, for the first five months from Nov. 1 until March 31, a list showing that he had trapped 103 beaver, 35 martens, 16 mink, 200 muskrats, 9 lynx, 45 weasel and 5 wolverine. Another had secured 37 beaver, 111 martens, 2 mink, 1 lynx, 43 weasel and 3 wolverine. Allowing as fair prices $5 for beaver, $6 for marten, $4 for mink, 25 cents for muskrat, $10 for lynx, 50 cents for weasel and $15 for wolverine, the first-mentioned trapper realized approximately $1050, and the second $900 for the five months' work.—All Outdoors.

One case of these supplies was sent on February 18 to the French Red Cross. Its receipt was gratefully acknowledged and the supplies themselves were sent to the hospitals at the front in the direction of Verdun. Two cases sent from Andover in May were forwarded to the Italian Red Cross and duly received by them in August. Another case went forward in July to Bordeaux for shipment to the Serbian Red Cross.

It is planned to continue this same work another year, and those who have so generously subscribed in the past, as well as others, will be asked to make subscription again. As it is hoped to combine this work with the work of making surgical dressings, subscribers will probably be called on for a larger percentage of their subscriptions this year than heretofore. It will be recalled that the first year 50 per cent of the subscription was asked; last year only 40 per cent was asked for, but the need now is worse than ever and it must be met by even greater generosity than in the past.

Generous contributions were received last year from the following donors to whom grateful acknowledgment is made:

School Committee Meeting

At the meeting of the School committee held Tuesday evening the committee on repairs was authorized to drive artesian wells at the North and Bailey schools at a cost not to exceed $1000. There has been considerable difficulty of late years in securing an adequate and satisfactory water supply at these schools and the arrangement for furnishing spring water has not been entirely successful. It is expected that the difficulty will now be overcome and work will be started at once. The installation of telephones at the Bradley and Indian Ridge schools was left with the same committee and these phones will be installed if the cost with the telephone company can be satisfactorily adjusted.

The board re-elected Dr. W. D. Walker school physician and James Napier trustee officer for the ensuing year.

How Blotting Paper Absorbs Ink

Every student of physics knows that water will run up a narrow tube by capillary attraction. Anything immersed in water has a similar attraction for the water; that is, the object becomes wet by the water that clings to it. The amount is limited by the weight of the liquid itself. Place your hand in water, and your hand, when withdrawn, is wet. The limited attraction between the hand and the water is gauged by the weight of the water that clings to the hand.

Imagine several hands placed close together in water but not touching one another. If this composite hand were formed of ten single hands, it would attract ten times as much water as the one hand would attract and hold on its surface. So a wisp of hay, composed of a hundred spears of dried grass, placed in water, will remove a hundred times as much of the fluid as would cling to one spear.

Under the microscope, fibrous blotting paper, when absorbing ink, resembles on a small scale, a marsh matted with shrubs and sticks and twigs, around which water is flowing as ink runs about and among the fibres that together form the spongy paper. There is a limit to the amount of liquid which a "blotter" will absorb, as there is a limit to the amount of water that a marsh will absorb without overflowing. That limit, in the "blotter," is the combined capillary attraction of the fibrous shrubs and sticks and twigs that together form the paper.—Popular Science Monthly.

Dr. Elwin D. Lane has purchased the property of Theron H. Lane on Locke street and will take up his residence there in the near future. This house was erected by the Phi Lambda Sigma Society of Phillips Academy and was later purchased and occupied by the late Frank H. Messer.

Dr. Cyrus W. Scott is erecting a house on Andover hill and on its completion it will be occupied by Byron F. Haroe of Lawrence.

A Cow That Made a Holiday

On October 9, 1871, according to the story which we are told and which we believe or not as we see fit, one Mrs. O'Leary went out into the barn to milk the cow on her little farm just on the outskirts of the city of Chicago. It was far from light and she carried a lantern, which she placed on the stable floor and then sat down to do her milking.

Now what particular devil possessed that cow does not appear. At any rate the cow was moved to kick, and the cow's hoof struck the lantern. The lantern fell over. The oil spilled on the floor, and the city of Chicago was all but wiped off the map.

That is the story we are told of the way the great Chicago fire started. Whether it is true or not is beside the mark. It is typical. Many fires started in just such a way.

But however it started, the city of Chicago has reason to remember that day in October, and so it is that Chicago has taken a mighty interest in the establishment of a National Fire Prevention Day on the anniversary of its misfortune, that other municipalities may learn a lesson from its experience.

The movement for Fire Prevention Day was started by the Safety First Federation of America. Last year, the governors of twenty-nine states gave forth proclamations calling upon their people to observe the day by cleaning up their homes; by removing rubbish from dark corners; by seeing that they were prepared to meet fire if it came. This year, it is believed that practically every state will take part in this great movement, and there is reason to hope that President Wilson may issue a proclamation that will go far toward awakening people to their grave danger and to put the movement on a firm foundation.

In his letters to the governors urging them to impress upon the people the need of preventing the loss of life and property by fire, Frederick H. Elliot, Executive Secretary of the Safety First Federation, laid down the following program:

That on October 9, all public buildings, factories and homes be thoroughly cleaned of rubbish accumulation.
That all heating, lighting and fire extinguishing apparatus be examined and, if found defective, promptly repaired.
That fire drills be held in all schools, factories and other places where fire drills are necessary.

That lectures be given in public schools and that sermons be preached in the churches on the subject of fire prevention, and that meetings be held to arouse public interest in the movement.

The latest estimate of the loss by fire in the United States and Canada in 1914 was $250,000,000. Add to this the cost of maintaining fire departments and the total is $500,000,000. This amount is so stupendous that the mind cannot conceive it. $500,000,000 would build a Panama Canal. There is a tax of $5 a head on every woman and child in the United States. It means that every family of seven people pays $35 a year for fire protection.

The idea that insurance pays for the loss is fallacious. Insurance companies pay nothing. Insurance companies are nothing but great clearing houses which collect from all their policy holders, so that those who are burned out can pay their losses and will not be ruined. The policy holder passes the expense on and adds it to his product, so that up to the last analysis it is the public who pay.

The pity of it all is that ninety per cent of all fires are preventable. Ninety per cent of all fires are due to carelessness or ignorance. It may be carelessness in erecting the building; it may be carelessness in placing matches or in hanging curtains close to a gas jet. It may be carelessness in neglecting to put up lightning rods, but it is carelessness and it might be prevented.

The Safety First Federation endorses the idea of making the person whose property is burned through carelessness pay for extinguishing that fire, as well as to pay for any damage done to his neighbor's property. In Pennsylvania, laws have just been passed embodying this principle, and it is now established in the city of New York, which recently collected from several concerns the cost of the water used on the fire, the pro rata salaries of the men who worked at it, a rental on the apparatus and an additional charge of 10 per cent on all to cover overhead.

It is held that a man should be just as much responsible for burning his neighbor's property as he would if his neighbor fell into a hole in his sidewalk and was hurt.

BOSTON THEATRES

COPLEY

The Henry Jewett Players who opened their season of repertory so auspiciously at the Copley Theatre, Boston, last Saturday night with a production of George Bernard Shaw's farce "You Never Can Tell," will be seen the coming week in J. M. Barrie's fantastic comedy, "The Admirable Crichton," which was first seen in Boston a dozen years ago with William Gillette in the title role.

The plot of "The Admirable Crichton" deals with the English spirit of caste and the influence of environment on character. Crichton is a butler in the family of an English peer and in the progress of the play all the characters are wrecked upon an uninhabited island in the South Pacific and thrown back upon the resources of their primeval ancestors.

In this contingency, Crichton proves himself a better man than either the earl or any of the guests of his family. Finally Crichton establishes himself as the master and reduces the earl and others of the party to the condition of menials. He proposes for the hand of the earl's daughter and the proposal is eagerly accepted. However, just as preparations are being made for the wedding ceremony a ship is sighted. It is within the power of Crichton to give or withhold the secret of their presence on the island. Knowing that once back in England he must sink again to the condition of a servant and that his love for Lady Mary must be hopeless he hesitates. Then despite the fact that Lady Mary pleads with him not to do so, he gives the signal and the party returns to England, Crichton becoming once more the obsequious servant and the aristocrats resuming their former positions.

The attraction for the third week beginning Monday night, October 16, will be Oscar Wilde's comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest."

PARK SQUARE

A new play, "Good Gracious Annabelle," by Clare Kummer, comes to the Park Square Theatre on next Monday evening, October 9, for a limited engagement of two weeks. From here it will go directly to the Republic Theatre, New York.

Arthur Hopkins, who presents the play, has gathered an unusual cast for this production. In the leading feminine part will be Lola Fisher, who was seen in Boston for a whole season in "Under Cover." May Vokes, who has virtually created a new character for the American stage, the slavery type, will have a part which brings out her best comic powers. Edwin Nicander, who was for years a favorite at the Castle Square Theatre and has since been connected with the leading Frohman productions, is one of the leading men, and Walter Hampden, famous for his work in "The Servant in the House" and "The City," here steps into a light part with perfect success.

The settings have been provided by a young New Englander, Robert Edmond Jones, who with his forthcoming scenery for the famous Russian Ballet, becomes one of the foremost stage artists of the world. The scenes for "Good Gracious Annabelle" are designed to fit the bright and "well tailored" character of the play. Miss Kummer, the author, has hitherto been known as the composer of popular songs, notably "Dearie" and "Egypt," which have an international reputation.

Mr. Hopkins, who has personally staged the play, brings it to Boston for its first Metropolitan performance in the belief that the verdict of Boston will count heavily toward success throughout the country.

HOLLIS STREET

The second and last week of the great American play of army life by Augustus Thomas, entitled "Rio Grande," is announced for the Hollis Street Theatre beginning Monday, October 9. In "Rio Grande" Mr. Thomas has written the epic of the brave little army of the United States. He has presented the atmosphere of the border military post in its true light, and he has staged a military play in which every military detail of uniform, regulations, and customs is correct in every particular.

"Rio Grande" is melodrama at its best. It is an interesting, thrilling, and altogether satisfying play of a little known phase of American life. It is full of stirring moments, and while it portrays no battle scenes there is still all the bustle and thrill of war times. When the cavalry rides out to repel a border raid of Mexican bandits the real patriotic spirit stirs every auditor. Mr. Thomas knows his Southwest intimately and he transfers the atmosphere and the character of his locale to the stage with perfect fidelity. Prominent army officers who saw "Rio Grande" at the Hollis Street Theatre last week were most enthusiastic in their praise of the play and the production.

The Charles Frohman company, under whose direction "Rio Grande" is presented, has provided one of the best all-around dramatic casts seen in Boston for a long time. The scenery represents the panorama of the military post at Laredo, Texas, and is a truthful picture of the landscape along the Rio Grande. There will be a special holiday matinee of "Rio Grande" at the Hollis on the afternoon of Columbus Day, Thursday, October 12.

GLOBE

Clara Kimball Young's pre-eminence as queen of the moving picture stars was amply demonstrated at Leow's Globe Theatre, Boston, last Monday, when the first release of her twelve-month series of picturizations of the most popular novels of the day, by the best-known authors, "The Common Law," opened a limited engagement of continuous performances from 10 a.m. to 10.30 p.m. Not only was the beautiful Miss Young the leading character in this "super-picture," but she appeared in person at afternoon and evening performances on the stage, and welcomed her thousands of friends. It was a busy day for this popular star. At 10 o'clock she addressed a large invited audience of girls ambitious to go into the "movies," giving them advice on how to get a start, and took care to warn them against the immoral influences surrounding life in the moving picture studios.

The second week of the limited engagement of Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law" at Leow's Globe Theatre will begin next Monday, October 9.

Miss Young has no equal in popularity among film fans, with the possible exception of Mary Pickford. Her work is internationally known, and, if the Boston and New York reviews of "The Common Law" are to be believed, the present spectacle, which cost one million dollars to produce, possibly marks the climax of her career on the screen.

As a result, Miss Young has set a new mark for strong and compelling photographic effects, as well as for breadth and power of action.

PLYMOUTH

"The Silent Witness," Otto Hauerbach's powerful drama, that had its Boston premier at the Plymouth last week, starts on its third week next Monday night, October 9. The stay of this play is limited to four weeks and a half. H. H. Frazee, its producer, proposes then to take it back to New York where its prosperous stay at the Fulton Theatre was interrupted to make way for another play that had been booked months ago.

Henry Kolker's portrayal of the District Attorney in "The Silent Witness" is one of the best things he has ever done on the stage. It is the district attorney who is called upon to prosecute a boy for murder, the boy turning out to be his own son.

Another occasion in the play that has many thrills for the audience is the "third degree" scene between the boy's mother and the assistant to the district attorney, who is the real prosecutor of the boy. The distracted mother is trapped into making admissions that are harmful to her boy's cause, and with tears she pleads that her son be given a fair chance for his life. Emilie Polini plays the role of the mother and finds many opportunities for emotional acting.

SHUBERT

No musical production of recent years has quite the unique record to boast of as the sensational successful musical farce "So Long Letty," which has to its credit engagements of twelve weeks in Los Angeles, sixteen weeks in San Francisco and twenty-six weeks in Chicago. Oliver Morosco, who gave Boston delightful "Peg O' My Heart," is sending this production to the Shubert Theatre for three weeks, only beginning next Monday, October 9, antecedent to its opening at New York's Shubert Theatre.

When Mr. Morosco first decided to produce "So Long Letty," he promised an evening's entertainment of the highest order, and that he accomplished his ambition, is now theatrical history, as this little gem had a longer run in Los Angeles than the producer's other phenomenal success, "Peg O' My Heart," which only ran ten weeks.

"So Long Letty" holds the unusual distinction of being a musical play with a decidedly interesting plot. It was written by Mr. Morosco and Elmer Harris and the lyrics and music were written by Earl Carroll. The story is of two friends who want to trade wives, and what happens to them forms a wonderful story.

In the staging, the producer has set a new mark for himself, as the backgrounds are the most lavish and interesting which have yet been bestowed on a Morosco play.

For the interpretation of this musical play, Mr. Morosco has assembled an unusually clever company numbering 83. There will be an extra holiday performance Thursday afternoon, October 12, on account of Columbus Day.

Footwear for Outdoor

By all means use woolen stockings. Get a shoe whose sole is at least as big as your stocking foot when you put your weight on it. Get a heel as broad and low as you can comfortably walk on—remember that walking on earth trails and leaf mold is infinitely easier on the nerves than walking on cement.

Have your shoe five to seven inches high, not lower, because rain and cold and mosquitoes have an affinity for unprotected ankles; not higher, because you add expense, weight and stuffy heat without gain. Leggings, if you want them will protect the calf. They should be of material resembling your skirt and knickerbocker.

Personally I have discarded leggings as a nuisance. I prefer heavy yarn socks over my stockings, with what's known generally as a "moccasin shoe"—the soft elk and calf leather of the moccasin, bellows tongue, but with counter and sole for support. With the socks to broaden your foot, a boy's shoe at $2.75 will serve admirably if you have difficulty in getting a woman's last.—Outing

Habits of Hornets and Wasps

Keep an eye on the hornets, yellow-jackets and wasp family generally; they are a tribe that, like the Sioux, Blackfeet and Apache Indians of old, are not to be trusted. But something must be said with regard to recent identifications of tribal forms, for it is worthy to note that only the social or colony-living Hymenoptera are prone to give battle, and often upon very slight pretext.

Those that live solitary lives, that build their nests alone, as the mud daubers, jug makers and diggers, never are offensive, though they can sting savagely if caught. They use their stings to kill their prey, but never to defend their homes. And this seems strange, too, for among these solitary Hymenoptera are some of the largest, most swiftly flying and fiercest looking species, as the big locust killer, the long-waisted wasps and spider hunters. That they possess a very considerable poison is made evident by the manner in which their insect victims succumb.

Altogether different are the social stingers, including the paper-nest hornet, the common wasp and the yellowjackets, for, like their cousins, the bees, they possess a community spirit to such a degree that they seek to defend most valiantly their homes against all comers. They show absolute bravery without the least fear, and will tackle a trespassing cow as quickly as they would a rabbit. No doubt an elephant, a tiger or a traction engine would cause them not a moment of hesitation.

Some kinds of these stinging folk are more truculent than others. The larger yellowjackets are as good natured as Italian bees and will hardly resent a slow and close inspection of the exterior of their nests in stumps or rocky places. The smaller yellowjackets often resent an approach nearer than five feet, especially after the nest, which is generally on or a little beneath the surface of the ground, has been jostled by shaking bushes or even heavy footfalls. A sudden movement is apt to arouse their suspicious ire, so look out for a streak of black and gold coming straight and almost with the speed of a bullet for your face.

The big, white-faced, black and white ringed paper-nest hornet, perhaps the world's first paper maker, and responsible for the big globular gray nest of that material hanging from the tree limb or vine, is never actually attacked. This is a useful species from its flycatching habits; it rarely builds where it greatly manes any one, and yet it is ever an object for destruction by boys and men, which is really wrong, for hornets certainly should be respected because of their honest defense of their homes. Away from home they will not sting.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Letters From Andover Soldiers

The Townsman publishes today two interesting letters from Andover soldiers who are doing guard duty at the Mexican border. One comes from Sergeant Frank L. Smith, son of Chief of Police Frank M. Smith, and the other from James Dick, the well-known clerk in the drug store of Crowley and Co., and son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander L. Dick of Cuba street. Both letters give a good idea of camp life and of the incidents connected with the duties of a soldier.

The letter from Sergeant Smith follows:

We've started now on what looks to me to be the last end of our service down here. Last Thursday morning we started out in heavy marching order and traveled all day. Reached Ysleta in the evening and stayed there in pup tents over night. And such a place, Dad. It's only one-quarter of a mile from the border and right on the boundary between Texas and the state of Chihuahua; the most beautiful and fertile country you ever saw. The valley of the Rio Grande at this place is very fertile and nearly everything that you raise back East and in California too, grows in abundance. As far as the eye can travel are fields of peppers, watermelons and sweet corn. Also miles and miles of apple, peach, pear, quince and plum trees. Everything is at its greenest just now, and believe me it looks good. Then take and drop in an irrigation ditch here and there and a lot of Mexican and Indian dobe shacks, also a few of the most beautiful of country bungalows, and you have the town of Ysleta.

You've probably seen pictures of Spanish Mission churches. Well, there is one of the most perfect specimens in that town that exists. It's made entirely of dobe clay, with red trimmings and the usual round-top belfry in front with bells that ring according to old customs. We heard the Angelus in the morning. Just beyond this mission and within one-half a mile of each other are the houses of Villa's mother and what was the house (it's now burned) of Ex-President Diaz. They say that when the Diaz hacienda burned they found over 4000 rounds of ammunition.

I didn't get a chance to go to the town at night as I was Sergeant of the Guard, but the boys say that the place is full of Texas Rangers. They are regular guys too, shoot first and talk afterward. One Hanger had seventeen nicks in the butt of his gun and every one meant a smuggler. The last two batteries who were here were fired on by Spigs from the bushes and you may imagine that your dutiful son kept both eyes open all night. It was a continual round of inspecting guard posts. All of the boys had their forty-fives loaded for big game with instructions to shoot without waiting for orders. Some of the fellows got rather nervous, but I don't think we were shot at.

We left Saturday to come back and came down the valley road into El Paso and back to the fort. That's some road, Dad. They mix the dobe clay with hay or straw and let the sun cook it. The nearest thing to Portland cement you ever saw. Then they put on crude oil from the wells, and there are several in the near vicinity, and you get a road that trims asphalt seven ways. By the way, I forgot to tell you about the watermelons. The Spigs, or natives, raise them about eight or ten inches long and we bought a raft of them for five or ten cents, the finest melons I ever ate. All along the way they would take them right off the vines and toss them over the wall for a nickel a throw. Some of the boys ate as many as twelve or fourteen and some ate more. Those that did had a fine time eating them and also a fine stomach ache afterwards. But it was once in a lifetime and what's a little colic beside a regular feast of melons.

Well, Dad, I think I've gone the limit now. I'm enclosing a picture of Sergeant Smith and his four corporals, one mighty fine bunch of boys too. But as I said before I'm going to quit now and go to bed. Remember me to the boys around town. I was just talking to Corporal Higgins of C Battery, so you see I can get a little of Andover when I get lonesome.

Mr. Dick's letter:

September 29, 1916
This has been a great experience for us even though it has been hard, and it is one that never will be forgotten. We took our second hike to Ysleta this week, which, by the way, is the second oldest town in the United States. The first time that we went was a soft trip compared with the one which we took last Tuesday. It was right in the middle of the watermelon and cantaloupe season and we had all that we could eat for five or ten cents, also all the pears that we wanted. The road that we took is along through the Rio Grande valley and is a very rich country. The trip that we took was a awful test on both men and horses.

We were called at four-thirty Tuesday morning and after caring for the horses we had our own mess and were on the way to Ysleta. Our battalion problem was to capture the second battalion which was returning from their trip to the same town that we were going to. We met them about five miles from camp and went into action. I don't know who won, I have heard that the first won and I have also heard that the second put it all over us, but of course I wouldn't believe that anyway. After the smoke of "battle" had cleared away we continued on our way. We stopped at the El Paso dairy and fed and watered the horses and had our feed of cold beans and lemonade which took up about an hour of our time. We reached Ysleta about six o'clock and it was almost eight before we had finished caring for the horses, putting up our pup tents and having our supper. Most of us decided that we had to have something to wash the dust out of our throats so we went into town. While we were there the guards came after us and told us that we had better go back to camp and turn in as we were liable to be called out before midnight. I lay down about ten o'clock and at eleven-thirty we were called out. The order was strike tents and make up our rolls. We had to do nearly all of this in the dark, and then harness the horses and strap the rolls to the horses. At twelve-thirty we started back to our camp. We were going all night with the exception of one twenty-minute halt. Just when the first call went at five-thirty we reached camp, tired and sore, and with a bunch of horses that were all in. After caring for them and having our own breakfast it was "pound the bunk" for all of us.

We took part in a big military parade last Thursday. We had to leave camp at five-thirty to be in our place in line by eight o'clock. The parade was reviewed by General Bell and there were about 27,600 men in line. This will give you an idea of how long the line was. The first of the line passed the reviewing stand at ten minutes past eleven and the last at twenty minutes of five. We didn't get back to camp until six-thirty and to top it off I had to go on guard that night.

We were going on a ten-day hike into New Mexico for target practice but I understand that the order has been changed and we are going to have our target practice out on the mesa about five miles from camp, which will make it much easier for us because we will return to camp every night.

There are twenty odd more batteries on the way here now and as soon as they reach here and get settled we are going to entrain for good old Massachusetts. We will be on the way home by the 15th of October if not before. But it can't be too soon for me as I sure am sick of this place.

I have kept in very good health and am feeling fine and hope that you are the same. Billy Higgins joins me in sending best regards.

Sincerely yours

JAMES DICK

Berlin's Child Adoption Scheme

The Adoption Office in Berlin now has nearly 10,000 orphans on its hands. Many are the children of soldiers killed in action. The office is arranging for the adoption of these children by childless couples in comfortable circumstances. The woman in charge said: "No child has been returned from all the adoptions which we have arranged, but the scheme entails much work. When the childless couple reaches the office the trouble begins. One wants a pretty child, blonde, with blue eyes; another asks for a clean child; a third requires a child with good intellectual proclivities. Many of the foster parents seem to think they can choose a child very much in the same way as they select a dress at a shop. They look at one child after another; nothing comes quite up to their ideas—one is too quiet, another too noisy; one too fat, and another too thin, and so on."—Berlin Lokal Anzeiger.

A Mighty Good Program

The completion of the highway work on School Street finishes a program of repairs for a group of important streets in the town that will add to the comfort of more people than any highway work that has been projected for many a year in Andover. The completion of this street gives to the residents of the central part of the town first-class highway service on one side of Main Street, practically all of Chestnut, Central, School, Essex, Brook, Park, and Elm streets, and while other important streets may need some minor repairs, practically none of them need the sort of rebuilding which the above-named streets have required to put them in the condition they now are.

Criticism that might come for such extended repairs in the center of the town is at the present time being answered by the job undertaken by the highway department to carry on Lowell street so that when the work is finished this year that new surface is expected to reach from Frye Village to the West Parish Church. This work will not entirely allay criticism, for there are many roads in the outskirts requiring attention, and representing to the people who live on them and use them, a service that is not satisfactory, and attention on the part of the Public Works department that would seem not to be as much as those in the outskirts believe they have a right to. In a way this criticism has some foundation, but with the entire road surface of the town in the condition it was three years ago, the Board of Public Works was obliged of necessity to pick a program which could do only a little each year as compared to the whole, but take the most important work first. This they have very clearly done, and the result has exceeded the expectations of those who knew the tremendous problem involved. If it is true that the result has exceeded the expectations of some, undoubtedly many believe that the expenditure of the big sum of money that has been put out in the last three years ought to have gone further, but as compared with the work which the same amount of money produces in state highways and other work along this line, the Townsman is pleased to go on record as giving hearty approval of results secured.

How these new roads are to wear remains to be seen. That they are not there for all time is proven by the results secured in other sections where the same sort of road building is carried on. We haven't succeeded in making very much progress in solving the very difficult problem facing all communities at the present time, particularly in New England, in caring for the entirely new type of traffic using the highways. To many people the results coming from the use of the macadam road is not at all satisfactory, and it is difficult to understand why we continue to use it in Massachusetts to the extent we do. Probably the answer is that we don't seem to have anything else that has proven better, but one needs only to go to some of the sections where the well built gravel road is kept in repair by constant attention, to be convinced that this much less expensive road has in it possibilities of service which we haven't given a fair test in Andover. Whatever may be the situation it is pretty definitely proven that at the present there isn't any kind of surface capable of standing the strain of automobile and truck traffic that is at all satisfactory for the horse, and this situation is going to demand pretty careful attention very soon, particularly in rural communities where, notwithstanding the development of the truck and the automobile, the horse is still a factor to be given consideration.

All in all, the people of Andover have reason to be pretty well satisfied with the highway situation as they face it at the close of the big amount of work that has been done this year. The Board of Public Works and Superintendent Cole deserve hearty commendation for the fruits of their labors now manifest.

The Schools and the Town

The opening of the big schools in town shows the largest attendance of young people from all parts of the world enjoying the facilities of Phillips and Abbot Academies that has ever come to Andover. It is evident that these big institutions are adding to the prestige so long and well established, by the succeeding years of service that they have rendered under present management, and the town has reason to be very proud of this success. The town has more, however, than a right to pride as its share in the responsibility for this situation, and perhaps never was that share demanding more urgent thought than at the present time.

The school authorities take every precaution and do every possible thing that wisdom dictates to preserve the health, morals, and general development of the pupils in their charge, but they must use in much of their work the facilities offered by the constituted municipality itself. These facilities stand for many different kinds of agencies needed to bring about a more satisfactory condition, not only for all-the-year dwellers in the community but for these visitors who are here for the special purpose of schooling.

Andover has gone through the recent crisis touching all of the eastern section of the United States, with a clean slate, and we may well be pleased over the result that is thus far known, but with no accurate knowledge of what causes this dread plague of infantile paralysis, it is quite possible that we may have trouble from that source at any time without knowing exactly why. The general reasons for requiring care are more pressing than ever at this time, and this care affects not only the authorities who have their particular responsibility but affects all the people of the community who have personal and individual responsibility. Cleanliness in person, in home inside and out, care in seeing that all of the business relations are carried on under the best possible conditions, well ventilated stores and public buildings, a hundred and one other things of this sort in which all of us have a part, should be more carefully watched this year than probably ever before, if we are to have not only the lives of the permanent residents of the community carefully looked after but the reputation of Andover as a school town where the conditions are the nearest possible to ideal that can be found, still further enhanced.

Editorial Cinders

It seems almost incomprehensible that the average working man in the country can get into the position where it is reported that some of the railroad men are, regarding the action by the President in having passed the so-called eight hour bill for railroad workers. Probably there isn't a railroad man in the country who wants to work eight hours or who would be satisfied to work eight hours and it is doubtful if there are any great numbers of them who have worked eight hours or even ten hours for many a long year. With this situation, it is very clear that the sole purpose of the so-called eight-hour bill was to arrange conditions so that with eight hours as a basis all sorts of increases could come to the men who had eight hours as a basis at the expense of the five times as many people who must pay the bill. Raising wages by law, if carried to this radical conclusion would bring about the greatest disaster to the commercial and industrial life of the nation that the world has ever seen, and nobody knows the truth of this better than the average man. He has found the best possible basis for wage fixing, either through his own personal bargaining or through the collective bargaining that his organization may make with a similar organization of employers. The shorter work day represented in eight hours is bound to come because the public has got itself pretty well adjusted to a belief that the stirring, pushing, active life of the present day demands more recreation to go along with the positive work and the positive rest. Any actual price for labor fixed by law can never come wisely to a nation which must increasingly depend upon the world at large for its prosperity and where the greater part of that world has no knowledge whatever of one in a hundred of the burdens and handicaps under which United States business is conducted.

The Republican State Convention tomorrow doesn't appear to promise very great excitement, but it will carry out a program of platform making and nomination approval which would seem to promise just the right amount of mass action that is necessary to back up the primary. Of course the platform doesn't cut much figure but certainly the achievements of the Republican administration in Massachusetts the past year ought to cut a good deal of a figure. There isn't any better argument for spreading Republicanism all over the nation than the result secured under the last nine months of Republican rule in Massachusetts which resulted in the big saving in state expenditures and such rearrangement in many departments as to promise even greater saving another year. "Democratic extravagance and incompetence" are the only reasons that need to be advanced at all for a defeat of that party and its candidates at the coming election, and this applies not only to the city and the state itself as we know it, but even in a greater degree to the nation itself as the public at large ought to know it.

NOT INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Dr. Simpson, State Health Inspector, Agrees With Local Physicians That Disease is Meningitis.

Much excitement was caused in town Wednesday by the report that a case of infantile paralysis had occurred in Abbott Village, but fortunately the rumor was unfounded, the disease being diagnosed as spinal meningitis both by Dr. Simpson of the State board and by local physicians who had examined the child previous to the coming of Dr. Simpson.

The victim is the two-year old son of James Currie of Essex street and Mr. Currie who works for the Smith & Dove Co. was sent home when the report spread that infantile paralysis was the illness. The Board of Health established a quarantine around the Currie home and an officer kept all persons away. The watch, however, was removed on Wednesday evening when it was established that the trouble was not infantile paralysis.

Everything is being done by the local authorities in the case and Miss Sprague, nurse for the Smith & Dove employees, will also watch the invalid child.

The case resulted fatally, the child dying Thursday night. Burial took place this morning.

Miscellaneous Shower

Several friends of Miss Grace Livingston tendered her a miscellaneous shower at the Riverview Bungalow in Bradford last Monday night. Shortly after the arrival of the party at the Bungalow a delicious supper was served. Later, vocal and instrumental music was enjoyed, and special entertainment was furnished by several of the company. Miss Livingston received a large number of pretty and useful gifts.

The following were present: Miss Livingston, Miss Florence West, Miss Alice Hayes of Lawrence, Miss Anna Holt, Miss Marion Piper, Miss Dora Ward, Miss Josephine Donovan, Miss Madge Higgins, Miss Josephine Higgins, Miss Bertha Livingston, Miss Emma Holt, Miss Elsie Holt, Miss Katherine Walsh, Miss Edith Sellers, Miss Maude Millett, and Miss M. E. Riley.

A Tribute

Miss Hannah A. Kittredge, whose death occurred at North Andover on September eleventh, was the daughter of Dr. Joseph Kittredge and Hannah (Hodges) Kittredge. She was born in 1834 in the old homestead which was built by her grandfather, Dr. Thomas Kittredge, in 1784. Her long life was passed in the old home, a life full of activity and usefulness to others.

She was a person of unusual character and lovable qualities, so while the older members of the family relied upon her counsel the younger members looked to her for the most part of their happiness.

Her interest continued in the Old North Church and in the North Andover Grange, in both of which she had been a member. Also in all matters pertaining to her native town. During several years of semi-invalidism all who saw her were impressed by her unflinching patience and cheerfulness and none ever left her without receiving from her a word of cheer. Until the end she appreciated the brightest in life and all her blessings and wanted to live. A rare woman, a steadfast friend, one whose memory will long be kept green in the hearts of her many friends.

Boy Scout News

The Boy Scouts have taken charge of the American flag raising at the grammar school as last year. Each morning the boys are on hand at 7.45 to raise the flag on the staff and in the afternoon at 3.45 the boys take "Old Glory" down. The Scouts are thereby receiving excellent instructions in patriotism.

The troop meetings have been held this week with a good attendance at each meeting. The work taken up this week has been signaling and first aid work. A new honor system has been installed that will stimulate good work on the part of each Scout.

A Senior Patrol Leaders school has been formed at which the Scout Executive teaches these leaders the advanced Scout work. A Patrol Leaders school has also been formed at which the various examinations in advanced Scout work is studied.

Tomorrow afternoon a hike will be taken by all the troops. All Scouts should attend this hike, the start being made at 2 o'clock. The Scouts will be in charge of the Scout Executive. Come prepared for a long hike, with good heavy shoes on the feet.

The Funeral Service of John Saunders

A large number of friends and of former associates in the work of the Smith and Dove Flax Mills attended the funeral service of John Saunders in the Free Church last Friday afternoon. Organist Booth played familiar hymns while the company was assembling.

Rev. C.W. Henry of Christ Church read the Scripture lesson, and Rev. F. A. Wilson of the Free Church offered prayer, spoke of Mr. Saunders' marked individuality and strong character, and read the hymn "O God our help in ages past" and Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar" which were favorite poems of Mr. Saunders.

Rev. Frederic Palmer of Cambridge, a long-time friend of the family, conducted the burial service at Spring Grove cemetery.

The four sons of Mr. Saunders acted as bearers.

The popular tenor's song this month is a "McCormack song" if ever there was one. "Then you'll Remember Me" is just the kind of sparkling, melodious, flowing air from which "our John" can win the last touch of beauty. Perhaps you remember the lovely air in the "Bohemian Girl."

WON CHAMPIONSHIP

Tyer Rubber Co.'s Baseball Team Defeated Ballardvale on Local Playstead Last Saturday 6 to 0.

Ballardvale challenged Tyer at baseball for the championship of the town and the contest on the playstead last Saturday afternoon proved that the boys from the village were hardly in Tyer's class, the final score being 6 to 0, due largely to Porter's fine pitching and air-tight fielding by Tyer. Two misplays were made, but neither of them did any damage. The visitors brought a large delegation of rooters who cheered continuously, but strong pitching and errors at crucial times prevented a celebration at the Vale. For six innings Porter was unhit and only three were secured off his delivery during the entire game, making a total of 17 hits and 1 run in 17 consecutive innings. The infield gave him splendid support, McNally, Brown and M. Lynch excelling.

Murphy pitched well for Ballardvale but hits and errors came at the same time and made runs easy. The visitors were lucky that more runs were not scored. Trow caught a nice game and was credited with one of the three hits. Adam Micheli played well at first and cracked out a two-bagger, being the only one of the visitors to reach third base.

Tyer scored a run in the second inning when after Killackey had fled out to Buckley, Brown reached first on a passed ball. He went to second on a passed ball and scored on Cussen's single. Keuhner also singled sending Cussen to third, the batter going to second. The next two men, however, went out.

Tyer got another run in the third after two men were out, when Porter reached first on J. Cronin's error. He went to third when Killackey singled to center and Porter scored on a passed ball. With two men on bases, however, Cussen was fanned by Murphy.

Tyer got a brace of runs in both the sixth and seventh.

As a result of the game considerable money changed hands, both teams being backed by their supporters. Tyer has lost only three games during the season.

Wedding

NEWCOMB—WOODWORTH

A wedding of local interest took place at the Eliot Church, Lowell Wednesday, at six o'clock when Russell Newcomb of New York and Miss Margaret Woodworth, daughter of Artemus B. Woodworth, Jr., of Lowell, were married by Rev. E. Victor Bigelow, minister of the South Church, formerly pastor of the Eliot Church, Lowell.

The bride, most attractively gowned, and who carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids, was attended by Miss Helen Brooks, Miss May Goodell, Miss Pauline Woodworth and Miss Elizabeth Woodworth as bridesmaids, and by Miss Lucia Woodworth, her sister, as maid of honor. The attendants were gowned in rainbow colors and carried chrysanthemums.

The bridegroom was attended by Francis Lord of Lynn as best man, and the ushers were Donald Green of Worcester, Paul Haber of New York, Winthrop Field and Brooks Woodworth of Lowell.

A largely attended reception followed at the home of the bride on Belmont street. The various rooms were beautifully decorated in laurel, palms and other greenery, the receiving party standing beneath a bower most effectively arranged. The color in the dining room was pink.

In the receiving were Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Newcomb of New York, parents of the groom, A. B. Woodworth, Jr., and the bride, Miss Lucia Woodworth, and the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Page. The D. GRANGE CHURCH SERVICE

Andover Grangers Attended Worship at West Church. Harvest Sermon by Rev. Newman Matthews

Last Sunday morning the members of the Andover Grange in response to an invitation from Rev. Newman Matthews, attended a special service at the West Church. They assembled at Grange Hall and marched in a body to the church, occupying seats in front. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers by Mrs. Winthrop Boutwell and Miss Carolyn J. Burt, while a splendid contribution of the "fruits of the earth" was made by Edward W. Burt.

Special music was finely rendered by a quartet consisting of Mrs. Harry Wright, Mrs. William Corliss, Robert A. Watson and William Corliss, who sang two anthems: "How Beautiful upon the Mountains", by Spinney, and "O Lord How Manifold" by Barnby. The response was "God Who Madest Earth and Heaven."

Rev. Newman Matthews preached on "Gathering Fruit Unto Life Eternal," and the text for the sermon was taken from the Gospel according to John, the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth verses of the fourth chapter: "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields, that they are white already unto harvest. He that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal; that he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together." He spoke in part as follows:

"The harvesting of the fruits of the field is used as a figure of work on a higher plane—work for the spiritual good of men, giving to them the knowledge of the true way of life for man as Christ revealed it and winning them to that way. It is work for the redeeming and ennobling of human character. It is a work to which all are really called. Such are the relations which we bear to our fellowmen that the opportunity is presented to all, even thrust upon all. We are all harvesters and gleaners in this higher field. What a noble task this is! How impressively this is suggested when the text speaks of it as 'gathering fruit unto life eternal.' The fruits men gather from the fields for their storehouses or for the markets perish with the using. The fruits gathered in this higher field abide. It is work that concerns, effects life eternal. What dignity and grandeur this imparts to our life! How pathetic a thing it would be if our work concerned only perishable things. The Grange recognizes this higher work."

"When Christ said to the Twelve that 'the fields were ripe unto harvest,' he meant not only that the Samaritans were in spiritual need, but he expressed his conviction that they would be responsive to any effort made in their behalf. Their reception of him was evidence of this. In a similar way he spoke of the people of Galilee. He was not only moved with compassion by their need, but he was animated by the conviction that they would be responsive. 'The harvest indeed is plentiful. However unresponsive the upper classes might be, the common people he believed were in a receptive mood. How is it with the people of our land and our age? It is to be feared that they are not as a whole responsive. It takes unusual efforts to win the attention of men to the true way of life. In so far as the people of our age are not responsive, the work to which we are called is not reaping but sowing. It is sowers and not reapers that are needed, those who will faithfully plant the seed in the minds of men. Here seems to be the great demand of our day. Sowing is necessary to any harvest, either our own sowing, or that of others. There can be no harvest without it. But let men remember that if there has been a sowing, there will be a harvest. The harvest cannot wholly fail. In this higher field the harvest may be long delayed. Indeed, those who have sown may not live to reap. Often one sows and another reaps. However discouraging the labor of sowing, however much the souls of men may be tried by long waiting, the harvest comes at length. Men do not labor in vain. 'He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing seed for sowing, shall doubtless come again with joy, bringing his sheaves with him.' But while we seem forced to admit that the age as a whole is not responsive, it is not wholly so. There are many of whom it may be said that they are ready for the harvest. There is much fruit that may be gathered unto life eternal and the call comes for us to be reapers as well as sowers."

"The time of harvest is a time of joy. 'The joy of the harvest' is one of the happy phrases of the Bible. When men begin to reap the golden grain and pluck the ripe fruit of plant and vine and tree, they feel amply repaid for all the hard labor, the vigilant care, the ceaseless struggle against every pest, and the patient waiting. They forget their weary toil in the joy of gathering in the harvest. So in this higher field the joy is natural and inevitable. It is higher and diviner. A great missionary testifies to this joy in this way: 'For three years we had toiled and prayed and taught for this. At the moment when I put the bread and wine into those dark hands, once stained with the blood of cannibalism, now stretched out to receive and partake the emblems of the Redeemer's love, I had a foretaste of the joy of glory that well nigh broke my heart to pieces. As seven of the new members led in prayer to Jesus, my heart was so full of joy that I could do little else but weep.' So will it be and so it is with all who reap for God and man."

Crayfish Last Resort

The crayfish often catches bass when nothing else will tempt. This bait hides under sunken stumps, stones, etc. Why it craves seclusion might be explained by any sizable bass. To secure the crayfish, cautiously raise sunken stuff until the nipping fellow is revealed upon the bottom, then steal a hand toward him until he can be secured. There is an art in this which can be mastered only

Making Paper Pulp

Robert Lee Gray, United States Vice Consul at Hanover, Germany, has furnished the following description of paper-pulp making by the bisulphite process:

Pine wood is peeled and chopped into pieces the size of a nut by rotating knives which grip the wood in a diagonal direction. These pieces are crushed and broken to shreds. After the knobby parts are picked out, the pieces thus prepared are put in big boilers, so-called "cookers," a solution of calcium sulphite and sulphuric acid called "sulphite lye" is poured over them, and the whole is heated by direct or indirect steam to several atmospheres of pressure until the lignine substance has been loosened and the cell fibre isolated.

For producing the sulphite lye, some factories still burn sulphur, but most of them have adopted Mitscherlich's process, which involves the use of roasting-stoves as they are used in the sulphuric acid factories.

For cooking the sulphite, the old-fashioned horizontal cooking apparatus is partly used. For the most part, however, vertical apparatus which is more up to date is employed. It is made from iron plate, with stone bricks inside.

After finishing the cooking, the steam is let off and the sulphurous acid gas escaping is led into the proper channels; the brown lye is discharged, and the cell stuff washed out in the cooker. The pieces of wood, after having undergone the treatment described, consist of loose agglomerates of cellulose fiber easy to crush; the crusts and firm parts are dissolved.

The waste lye contains various kinds of sugar, dextrose coming from cellulose, xyllose, from xylan, and there are acetic acid, tannin, and nitrogenous compositions the use of which is still an important question. About 50 per cent of the treated wood has been going to waste in the lye and forming a very inconvenient waste mass; it is led to rivers after having been neutralized and freed from fiber. In Washum the lye is evaporated and a "thick lye," very sticky and clammy is obtained. An attempt has been made to use it as an agglutinant and for dressing purposes.

In Sweden a factory which has been founded manufactures alcohol from the waste lye, with one per cent of fermenting sugar, and makes a profit by this process.

Spain Increases Peanut Crop

Peanuts were grown formerly in single province of southern Spain. They are now raised in other provinces of the country and the area devoted to them is extending, writes Consul General Carl Bailey Hurst, Barcelona. At present about 8000 hectares (19,850 acres) are annually planted in peanuts with a yield of approximately 14,700 long tons, so that Spain stands first among European countries in the production of this crop. It has been demonstrated here that if 443 dry quarts of seed peanuts are planted per acre and rich nitrogenous manure used at the rate of about one-fifth of a ton per acre, the average production in Spain can amount to 1.03 long tons per acre. The wholesale price of peanuts on the local market is about $2.45 per 100 pounds.

While quantities of peanuts are consumed as food in the Peninsula, the nut is also utilized for the production of oil. The export of oil has increased, having amounted in 1913 to 7.87 long tons, in 1914 to 4.9 long tons, and in 1915 to 17.7 long tons. The export of the nut, on the other hand, has decreased, having been 5280 long tons in 1913, 2506 long tons in 1914, and 3515 long tons in 1915. The greater part of exported oil goes to Porto Rico and Cuba; the peanuts to Holland, Great Britain, the United States, Algeria and France.

International Bird Protection

Perfecting a treaty with Great Britain for the protection of migratory birds seems pretty small game for an Administration which has Mexico, the undersea warfare and the protection of American mails and shipments on its hands.

But the treaty which Secretary Lansing signed recently is really due to the initiative of Elihu Root, so if the charge of frivolity is to be made against it the Republicans will have to share the odium. More than a year before the European war Mr. Root introduced a resolution in the Senate that the President be requested to propose to other Governments on this continent a convention for the mutual protection of migratory birds. The treaty now to be sent to the Senate is the response to that resolution, although most people will be amazed that the State Department remembered the matter under the pressure of the more serious subjects with which it has been dealing so constantly.

The basis of the new treaty is not sentiment, but economics. It is supported by a showing from the Department of Agriculture that the crops of this country suffer injuries running upward of $800,000,000 a year from insect pests, and that the birds are among the most effective enemies of these destroyers. Among the pests which the department specified that birds kill are the gypsy moth, which has ruined so many Northern shade trees, and the boll weevil, which has sometimes been blamed for short cotton crops. We now have laws offering much more thorough protection to birds during their breeding and migratory seasons than was believed possible a few years ago, but the effect of those laws is limited by the fact that many of these insect eaters cross the Canadian line in the course of their migrations. The treaty seeks to secure protection for them in Canada like that given here, and to secure like protection to Canadian birds which come south in the winter season. Entirely aside from the agricultural value of birds as insect destroyers, the treaty will be widely approved on grounds of mercy. Many of the insect eaters are also songsters, and they add to the attractiveness of suburban life as well as to the value of the crops.

Woman Sells Lumber

The story of how a woman acted as an official of the great Government sawmills at Neopit, Wis., on the Menominee Indian reservation, the home of the biggest white pine tract remaining in northern Wisconsin, and of how she developed from a sales manager for the Indian mills to a wholesaler on her own account, is the story of Miss E. S. Gallet of Chilton, Wis.

The letterhead she uses, says the National Lumber Bulletin, does not hint at the fact, which many who buy from her do not know, that their alert business correspondent is a woman. With a business ability equal to a man's, she is developing an extensive business, merchandising the lumber from small tracts in the oldest settled portion of the State.

Miss Gallet has been engaged in the wholesale lumber business for years, dealing almost exclusively in northern hardwoods. Besides handling this stock on a commission and marginal basis, she buys the hardwood cuts of small mills and disposes of this stock to the ultimate consumers. "This business, she says, "is rather on a small scale, for I have not yet handled more than 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 feet of lumber a year."

In connection with this, in the last two years she has developed quite a business in red and white oak and basswood veneer logs. These logs are not purchased from the northern part of the State, but from tracts in the older settled communities, where the material procured is of the best possible kind. These cuts include other woods, but the ones mentioned are the most valuable and desirable.

Miss Gallet served the Government at Neopit, as sales manager of the Menominee Indian Mills about three years. She founded the sales department, going there soon after the first cut of lumber was made. The conditions of selling, however, together with the nature of the operation, made the work there much more difficult and less satisfactory than in a private enterprise, although the timber available for manufacture can not be excelled in this part of the country. After remaining there three years she resigned to take up the line of work in which she is now engaged.

TO SUPPORT REPUBLICANS

New York, Oct. 5.—The American party, organized in 1914 by William Sulzer, plans to take an active part in the present campaign, it was announced here.

Sulzer asserts that his party had definitely decided to support the entire Democratic ticket until it was "double-crossed" recently by Democratic leaders who were entrusted with petitions to be filed and failed to file them.

Now, he says, the party will support the national Republican ticket and a part of the state Republican ticket. William F. McCombs, nominee of the Democrats for the United States senate, will be favored, however.

Sulzer expressed the opinion that his party would poll 50,000 votes—enough, he predicted, to defeat any candidate on an opposing ticket if the vote is at all close.

EXCHANGE CURT GREETINGS

Taft and Roosevelt Clasp Hands and Bow at Hughes Reception

New York, Oct. 4.—Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft clasped hands for a moment last night at the Union League club's reception to Charles E. Hughes.

"How do you do?" said Taft.

"How do you do?" Roosevelt replied.

Each bowed, and Roosevelt passed on to shake hands with other guests, leaving Taft to greet those who followed. A few moments later Roosevelt took his place in the receiving line. He stood between Hughes and Chauncey M. Depew. Just the other side of Depew stood Taft.

Thus, standing in the same receiving line, they shook hands with the hundreds of club members and their guests who filed past during the evening. They did not meet again, however, or exchange any other word than the commonplace greeting.

The Glenwood Revolving Coal Grate is easy to shake at all times, and simply fine for removing clinkers. It is triangular in shape, with three different sides for wear.

The Ash Pan rests on a roller bearing frame—just open door and it rolls out at the slightest touch, neat and clean.

SOCCER

Andover 1, Haverhill 1

Andover United was held to a tie score with Haverhill last Saturday in the local cricket field, one goal each. There were very few people present when the teams lined up. Both teams were weak in front of goal. Andover played against a strong wind in the first half, which eased off a good deal before second half had gone far. Failure of the Andover team to play its left wing in the first half was undoubtedly the cause of their failing to score more goals. In this period the home team persisted in feeding the right wing, although this was almost useless against the bustling playing of Ness, and the kicking of Clarke. Glass played a nice game at center-half, and prevented the home inside men from combining successfully. Forsyth did what little he got to do well. Hackney was the best forward on the field, getting away several times with a strength and speed that is bound to cause trouble to any defense.

The first half was dull, the cross wind sending the ball into touch time after time. Neither side showed any team play in this half. Haverhill opened the scoring early in the second period but Andover soon equalized, thanks to the watchfulness of Coleman, who quickly grasped a chance. At this stage Andover took a grip on the game but could not score, although it looked several times as if they would. Towards the finish the Haverhill boys were getting their share of the game again, but they were also unable to do more than threaten the goal.

Andover needs strengthening and unless this is done soon the team will be out of the race and interest will be lost. The front line is very weak while the defense is none too sure, although Low is playing a star game this season. Five local players were included in the Haverhill eleven and some of these ought to be on the local team.

The first half was evenly contested and ended without scoring although both sides missed several good chances.

The second half opened faster. Haverhill failed to profit from a free kick. For the first time the home forwards showed real determination. J. Nicoll, however, spoiled their advance by shooting across the goal. Clarke sent far down the field, and Hawkins and J. Low made for the ball; the winger swiftly drew clear of the defense and easily beat Kershaw from fifteen yard range.

Urged on by their supporters Andover made a spirited attack on the Haverhill goal and Coleman equalized from a nice place by Black. Andover held the upper hand but could not get the winning goal.

The summary:
Haverhill:—Forsyth; Clark, Gorrie; Ness, Glass, Chalmers; F. Nicoll, Poole, Hawkins, W. Low, Hackney.
Andover:—Kershaw; J. Low, Downs; Coleman, Renny, Black; J. Nicoll, Carnathan, Spencer, Dougherty, Ramsey.

Score, Andover 1, Haverhill 1. Goals, Hackney, Coleman. Referee, James Tuson. Linesmen, E. J. Anderson, A. Atherton. Time, 45 minute halves.

The Andover United team will play the U.S.M.A.A. team of Beverly, Saturday, in a District league game. The following players will make the trip: Kershaw, Nicoll, Low, Downs, Coleman, Renny, Black, Carnathan, Spence, Killackey, Porter, Dougherty and Ramsey.

In the first round of the State Cup competition, Andover will meet Methuen on Columbus Day afternoon in the cricket field.

Wanted—Hitching Posts

A few places still are unsubdued by the automobile's uncharitable wheels. One of these is Danbury, Conn. One of its citizens, writing to his home paper, The Danbury News, has a quaint complaint to make. He deplores the lack of hitching posts within the city limits. He points to the fact that while Danbury boasts a general hitching place, "few persons care to go there and leave some of their purchases while they go for others, with the prospect of having some of them stolen." Moreover, he knows for a fact that Danbury merchants lost two important sales last week because they had no hitching posts in front of their shops.

Fortunate Danbury! Life still goes on its placid way in Connecticut. Within the fifty-mile radius of Syracuse, on the shores of one of the lakes of which Central New Yorkers ought to be proud, but which they are in the habit of ignoring because it is directly under their noses, is a hotel which still attempts to carry on the business of affording lodging for beast as well as man. Over the long, rambling stable is a weather-beaten sign:

Hitching, 10c.
With hay, 15c.
Hay and grain, 25c.

A glance in the stable door tells the story. Not a horse in the stalls—for the stalls have been torn out. And the floor is of cement. There are usually from ten to twenty motor cars standing insolently in the places once occupied by horses. The landlord sells much grass and little hay. There is no hitching post in sight.

We may yet have to go to Danbury to escape from the mad rush of the automobile.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

Raising Frogs in Louisiana

Sweepson Earle, chief engineer of the Conservation Commission of Maryland, is making an investigation as to the possibilities of creating a new industry in the State by catching bullfrogs and marketing them.

"In Maryland," said Mr. Earle, "there are many streams and freshwater ponds where the bullfrog thrives and where his kind can be caught in paying quantities."

"As the outlay necessary to take these frogs from the waters is practically little or nothing, while the return in the way of profit is many hundred-fold, thousands of dollars could be made by the citizens of the State from this undeveloped industry. That frog-catching will pay here, one has only to look at the recent report of the Conservation Commission of the State of Louisiana."

"While in Louisiana in 1914 my attention was called to the frog industry, which had developed to large proportions. The following is taken from a recent report from the State of Louisiana:

"The frog industry was worth, approximately, $110,000 to this State for the calendar year ending Dec. 31, a gain of $10,000 over the year 1913."

"According to the most reliable and available information that we have regarding this product, 1,000,000 frogs were shipped out of the State in the year 1915, also 100,000 were used in New Orleans, and about as many consumed elsewhere in the State. Early in the season Louisiana frogs sold at from $1 to $1.50 per dozen; in midsummer from 50 to 75 cents a dozen."—Baltimore Star.

Rockland, Me., Oct. 2.—The torpedo boat destroyer Wilkes, in her standardization trials here, exceeded the speed and economy of fuel consumption requirements, according to statements of her builders.

Short Time For Machinery

The South Carolina Cotton Manufacturers' Association recently resolved to comply with the attorney general's construction of the law to the effect that the legal hours of labor in that State apply to machines. The opinion applied specifically to automatic cotton looms which it has been the custom to allow to run during the lunch hour. Such slight attendance as the machinery needed was given by arrangements allowing the lunch hour at another time for the few employees who were needed for that purpose, their hours not being extended by the duty. According to the plain intent of the opinion there must be the same hours for machines as for wage earners in South Carolina. A machine can work but sixty hours, and two men cannot be given the work of attending the same machine for 120 hours. There is a plain waste of capital for the larger number of machines, and a loss of work which might be given if it were lawful to work the existing machines longer hours. The interest of the general public does not lie in the creation of work or multiplication of jobs in this manner, but in the increase of product, and the tendency toward lower prices, resulting from the best use of the time of both men and machinery.

The case is not singular, as it might be thought. The same question arose over the automatic looms of the mills at Fall River. There the workers struck not for shorter hours or higher wages for themselves, but for a reduction of the product of the machines. The case is not exactly the one sometimes alleged against capital, that machines and patents are held idle. There the machine or the patent which is best adapted for the use is employed, since it is not reasonable to use the worse when it is possible to use the better. Repeatedly it has been shown that the closing of factories and the disuse of inferior machinery or patents have been followed by an increase of product. That is to the interest of capital, and therein the interest of capital and that of the consuming public are identical. The matter of profit is less important than the production of goods, and if the production of goods should reach the sky—as it would not—there would be little objection to profits rising similarly. But increase of wages caused by waste of capital, and resulting in decreased production of goods, and increase of prices through increase of costs, are contrary to the public interest, and not so much to the interest of wage earners as labor leaders think and teach. Attorney General Peoples' opinion ought to be tested in the courts. If it is the law it ought not to be allowed to remain the law. It is necessary to draw the line somewhere regarding legislation only nominally in the interest of labor, and actually contrary to the interest of every other portion of the community.

Is Lowell the Modern Athens?

There are a number of Greek benevolent societies and social clubs in Boston, but we are particularly pleased to learn that a new club is being organized among Greeks who are American citizens, with the purpose of promoting naturalization and good citizenship among our people.

With the organization of the Greeks in Somerville, the number of Greek churches in this Commonwealth is now 16. They are located in the following cities: Boston, Lowell, Lynn, Peabody, Haverhill, Ipswich, Brockton, New Bedford, Springfield (two), Worcester, Clinton, Fitchburg, Holyoke, Chicopee and Somerville.

The largest Greek communities in this State are those of Boston, Lowell, Haverhill and Lynn. Strangely, the largest of all is that of Lowell, where the Greeks number about 10,000 souls.—Eretna.

A Million a Week

Henry Ford is estimated to be making a million a week—a million dollars; not automobiles. Not many of us are doing so well. Yet Mr. Ford's wealth excites no envy to speak of. He is an exceptional millionaire in that nobody begrudges him what he makes—the more the merrier. He seems to care very little for the money itself, which indifference has engendered a like public indifference to it.

Yet he is an exceptionally enviable multimillionaire, as multimillionaires go in this country. Most of our "big rich" men are ill-paid at best for their trouble and energy in getting rich, and the trouble and worry consequent upon that state—while the little they have is begrudged them. The untold annoyances of a million a week to the average poor multimillionaire are as numerous and persistent as the flies that buzz around a molasses barrel which cannot be swatted, while the grave and sober cares consequent upon imponderable but tumultuous millions are greater than a king's. Nobody sympathizes with the poor multimillionaire even when his money-making processes wreck his health or grind the very life out of him.

The Happy Valley of Rasselas is not and never was peopled by multimillionaires, and the maker of jittneys is fortunate to be as familiar with the valley's landscape as the people who ride in them.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Meeting of Andover C. E. Union

The quarterly meeting of the Andover C. E. Union was held with the Ballardvale Society on last Friday evening. There was a large delegation from each of the societies present and much enthusiasm was manifested throughout the evening. Mr. Lewis, president of the Union, presided; and the following excellent program was carried out: Scripture reading, Rev. Mr. Matthews of West church; prayer, Rev. W. E. Lombard of Baptist church; address of welcome by Miss Izetta Fillebrown, president of Ballardvale society; vocal duet, Mrs. Frank Juhlmann and Miss Marion Schneider; report of missionary reporter, Miss Elta Greenwood; song, Mrs. Harlow. The banner was awarded to the Free church society. A message of sympathy and best wishes for his immediate recovery was voted to be sent to Dr. William Shaw, general secretary of the society.

The address of the evening was given by Rev. Joseph H. Hill of Salem. Mr. Hill gave one of his characteristic addresses and his pointed and witty references to the coming Salem C. E. convention aroused much interest and enthusiasm. Following the address a reading was given by Miss Izetta Fillebrown followed by a social hour. The meeting proved to be the best meeting held by the Union.

PHILLIPS AND ABBOT OPEN

The new-comers on the faculty are as follows: S. O. Brown, Instructor in English; C. E. Keith, Latin and Spanish; E. T. Brewster, General Science; F. J. Daly, who will take Mr. Lillard's place as Principal's Assistant, but will not teach. He will also coach the football team.

It is understood that the number of students is only limited to the facilities of the school as some 250 applicants had been refused due to the fact that there were no rooms to be had, and it would have over-taxed the teaching force. One of the students is the son of the Prince of Sangha, who is named Snitwongse, Mon Luang Chiew, who has a brother at Exeter and an uncle it is understood, at Harvard.

Abbot Academy opened Wednesday morning with a registration of one hundred boarding pupils and forty-five day-scholars.

There are a number of changes in the teaching staff. The Latin department is to be in charge of Miss Laura K. Pettigell of Cambridge. Miss Pettigell is a graduate of Smith College, has studied two years at Radcliffe and has had four years' experience in teaching. She will be assisted by Miss Adele C. Martin of New Brunswick, New Jersey, a graduate of Wellesley College. Miss Alida B. Carson of New York, a graduate of the Wellesley School of Hygiene, will be in charge of the work in Physical Education. Miss Sherman will be assisted in the French department by Madame Bertha G. Romero of Salem. Madame Romero, who is a native of Tours, married a Spanish lawyer and has lived in Spain and the Argentine. The department of Household Science is to be under the management of the Garland School in Boston. Miss Evelyn Cummings, who has been for seven or eight years one of Mrs. Stannard's strongest teachers, will have charge of the work in Housewifery and Miss Agnes Donham will have the classes in Household Management. Vocal Expression will be taught by Miss Ethel P. Potter, a graduate of Wellesley, who studied three years at the Boston School of Expression and who has been a teacher there for two years. The violin-teaching will be under the direction of Miss Marie Nichols. Miss Mildred Gates of Worcester, a pupil of Miss Nichols, will be in charge. Miss Harriet Bixby of North Andover, who was formerly secretary to Miss Bailey, will be supervisor of the day scholars' room.

Through the kindness of one of the trustees, the floor and walls of Davis Hall have been thoroughly renovated and refinished during the summer months.

The entire plan for the coloring of the vestibule and walls has been done under the personal direction of Mr. Richardson, the Boston architect.

Rally Day Service

Last Sunday morning appropriate exercises were held at the Free Church in observance of Rally Day for the Sunday School. There was a large congregation and the exercises were of an exceedingly interesting nature. The members of the primary department, under the direction of Miss Alice S. Coultis, occupied seats in front and those who had qualified received certificates of promotion to the junior department. The graduates numbered twenty-three and repeated very creditably, the Twenty-Third Psalm, The Beatitudes, The Apostles' Creed, The Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments.

The Cradle Roll department numbers one hundred five members, not including the eighteen who were admitted to the Primary department Sunday morning, each of whom received a certificate from Rev. F. A. Wilson. Special music was rendered by the junior and senior choirs. "Christian Training of the Young" was the subject of Mr. Wilson's address and his text was from Eph. 6:4,—"Bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." He said that there were two places where the Christian training should be at its best, the home and Sunday School. He had noticed that wherever a child had received an early Christian training, that training always stayed with it through life in a more or less marked degree. Mr. Wilson paid a tribute to the late John Saunders, holding him up as one who had never forgotten his early training in a Christian home.

At the session of the Sunday School at noon special exercises were held with roll call, and a very impressive sight was when Mr. Bradford's class of young men arose and answered the roll call. Miss Coultis retires as superintendent of the primary department and her place will be taken by Miss Lucy Allen. The program at the church service:
